NORTHERN EDGE

Alaska's Premier Joint Training Exercise

 Air Ranges

 Land Ranges

 Sea Ranges

NORTHERN EDGE 2017

May 1 - 12, 2017

Background

NORTHERN EDGE has its roots in military exercises beginning in 1975 with JACK FROST (1975-79), BRIM FROST (81-89), Arctic Warrior (91-92), then NORTHERN EDGE beginning in 1993.

NORTHERN EDGE 2017 (NE17) is one in a series of U.S. Pacific Command (USPACOM) exercises which prepare joint forces to respond to crises in the Indo-Asia-Pacific region. With an emphasis on integrating joint forces for real-world contingencies, the exercise is designed to sharpen participant skills; practice operations, techniques and procedures; improve command, control and communications; and to develop interoperable plans and programs.

Environmental Protection

A thorough environmental analysis was conducted of NE17 activities. Alaskan Command is proud of its environmental stewardship and goes to great lengths to minimize impacts to the environment. Aerial and land-based military training activities in or near Alaska, including NORTHERN EDGE exercises, are analyzed in the Joint Pacific Alaska Range Complex Environmental Impact Statement, which was completed by the Air Force and Army in 2013 (see <http://www.iber.af.mil/Portals/144/units/JPARC/PDF/JPARC-Executive-Summary-JPARC-FEIS-June-2013.pdf>). Maritime activities, including future NORTHERN EDGE exercises, were re-analyzed and recently released in the Navy's 2016 Gulf of Alaska Final Supplemental Environmental Impact Statement (see <https://goa.eis.com>). The at-sea portions of NORTHERN EDGE occur within the Temporary Maritime Activities Area, which begins more than 12 nautical miles from shore.

U.S. Navy training activities are conducted with an extensive set of mitigation measures designed to minimize the potential risk to marine life. The Navy has conducted NORTHERN EDGE in the Gulf of Alaska for many decades without significant impact to the environment. The mitigation measures used by the Navy during NORTHERN EDGE are developed and authorized by permit from the National Marine Fisheries Service.

Training

Alaska's expansive, instrumented joint training land ranges, airspace, and maritime areas, along with the support of Alaska's Army and Air Force bases provide a unique joint training venue that cannot be found anywhere else in the Pacific region.

NE17 provides more than 6,000 active-duty, National Guard and Reserve component Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, and Coast Guard military participants the opportunity to train together in Alaska's vast Joint Pacific Alaska Range Complex (JPARC), including the Gulf of Alaska (GoA) maritime training area.

The diverse environment and challenging terrain of the JPARC allows for units to alert, deploy and fight over realistic engagement distances. This includes mobile land warfare and fighter aircraft from the Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force practicing long-distance, power projection using air-refueling assets.

NE17 participants will practice tactics, techniques and procedures associated with defensive counter air, close air support, air interdiction of marine targets, and personnel recovery missions. Land-based forces will hone their skills in engaging targets at sea, and forces normally sea-based will practice engaging targets on the land.

NORTHERN EDGE 2017 highlights:

- Training in 65,000 square miles of airspace, 42,000 square nautical miles of ocean, and 1.5 million acres of maneuver land as part of the Joint Pacific Alaska Range Complex.
- Alaska's size enables the military to have the largest air-ground training complex in America.
- Exercise Northern Edge provides the opportunity to hone current and test future applications of combat operations and weapons capabilities.
- More than 2,000 personnel deploy to Alaska during the exercise. Participants will be based at the major Alaska Army and Air Force installations.
- Joint training event NE17 provides effective, flexible and capabilities-centered joint forces ready for deployment worldwide and enables real-world proficiency in detection, identification and tracking of units at sea, in the air and on land, and response to multiple crises.
- Environmental protection is an integral part of the exercise. The military in Alaska has conducted thorough environmental analysis of the activities being conducted as part of NE17.

Closing the Loop

Detailed after-action reviews will occur at all levels of exercise play. This process ensures units incorporate "lessons learned" from NE17 into better joint military planning, tactics, techniques, and procedures.
